Amla is rich in vitamin C and is considered one of the most powerful regenerating herbs in Indian traditional medicine.

One possible explanation for the different findings is that if single inseminations are not properly timed for ovulation, success rates would improve with a double insemination protocol.

However, she cannot be seen to do so in good faith, as the ASA incident shows that the claim in general was deemed misleading.

And most chain stores often have more than one person working the pharmacy counter.